PRELIMINARY ROUND CASE BOOK

IUT Society of Islamic Knowledge Seekers

INTRODUCTION

TRANSGENDER IDEOLOGY

In recent years, there has been a notable surge in the popularity of transgender ideology, which challenges traditional distinctions between male and female. This ideology has become closely intertwined with the western LGBTQIA+ movement. However, it is essential to acknowledge that such beliefs and actions are strictly prohibited in Islam, as they contradict the commandments derived from Allah Subhanahu wa ta'ala.

WITHIN QURAN

It is widely recognized that the Quran explicitly states that humankind has been divinely created from a male and a female, as exemplified by the verse:

“O MANKIND! WE CREATED YOU FROM A MALE AND A FEMALE...”
[SURAH AL-HUJURAT: 13]

WITHIN QURAN

Furthermore, the Quran categorically delineates mankind into two distinct sexes, male and female, as evident in passages such as:

“...AND FROM THE TWO OF THEM, HE SPREAD FORTH MULTITUDES OF MEN AND WOMEN”

[SURAH AN-NISA: 1]

&

“AND THE MALE IS NOT LIKE THE FEMALE...”

[SURAH AL-IMRAN: 36]

WITHIN QURAN

As per Islamic philosophy, both sexes are equally honorable, with no spiritual superiority of one gender over the other. Consequently, both men and women enjoy equal access to divine blessings, grace, forgiveness, and the promise of Paradise.

WITHIN QURAN

The Quran contains numerous verses that unequivocally reference the existence of two sexes, affirming a fundamental gender binary. This reality remains indisputable, as there are no references within the Quran to anything beyond this binary paradigm.

WITHIN FIQH

Islamic jurisprudence and social norms further solidify this understanding, as evidenced by the myriad of legal and social rulings that differentiate between males and females. These distinctions permeate all aspects of Islamic law, spanning from foundational principles outlined in chapters on purification to intricate matters addressed in chapters concerning inheritance.

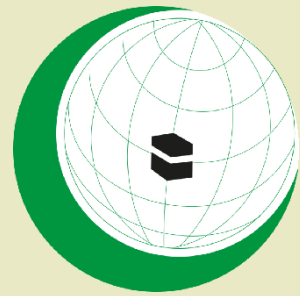

WITHIN FIQH

The Islamic Sharī'ah inherently acknowledges and accommodates gender-based differentiations, reflecting distinct rulings for men and women across various realms of fiqh.

EXAMPLE

Henceforth, the contemporary assertion that gender is a mere human construct, divorced from biological sex and solely influenced by cultural factors, stands in direct contradiction to Scripture, the Shari'ah, biological principles, common sense, and the collective historical experiences of humankind. Therefore, those who wish to abide by the Shari'ah must identify their gender with their biological sex (this includes the issue of personal pronouns) and live by the rulings associated with that gender.

PROBLEM

Hence, it is our primary responsibility as Muslims to uphold our society as well as our families against this atrocious theft of our faith. State potential solutions to this challenge in the light of the life and teachings of our beloved Prophet Muhammad (ﷺ). You are also encouraged to speak regarding the movement's irrationality, lack of scientific basis, and social imbalance.
